The following is a quotation of the first paragraph of 35 U.S.C. 112:

The specification shall contain a written description of the invention, and of the manner and process of making and using it, in such full, clear, concise, and exact terms as to enable any person skilled in the art to which it pertains, or with which it is most nearly connected, to make and use the same and shall set forth the best mode contemplated by the inventor of carrying out his invention.

Claims 1-21, 23-37, and 61 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, first paragraph, as failing to comply with the written description requirement. The claim(s) contains subject matter which was not described in the specification in such a way as to reasonably convey to one skilled in the relevant art that the inventor(s), at the time the application was filed, had possession of the claimed invention. The claims now recite that the device derives an indication of the degree of perfusion failure from blood flow measurements, in combination with at least one of pH and PCO₂ measurements. It is the examiner's position that the specification states that such an indication may be derived, but it does not state that the device does the deriving. Hence, the claims as currently written, lack an adequate written description in the disclosure. Since the limitation at issue was added via amendment, the limitation constitutes new matter.

As such, since the claims lack support in the specification, the claims also lack support in the parent applications. As such, the claims only have a filing date of the current case, or 9/23/2003.

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 1-21, 23-38, and 61 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Kimball et al 6258046. As noted above, the current claims only have an effective date of 9/23/2003. Kimball patented 7/10/2001 and hence is available as a 102(b) type reference. Kimball has all of the claimed features, except that it does not derive an indication of the perfusion failure. Rather, Kimball merely teaches that an increased PCO₂ relative to normal, a decreased pH relative to normal, and blood flow that is substantially lower than normal and indicators in combination, of perfusion failure. Based on this teaching, it would have been obvious to modify Kimball to use a computer to perform the stated comparisons, to eliminate human error in the measurements.

Applicant's arguments filed 7/22/2009 have been fully considered but they are moot in view of the new grounds of rejection.

Applicant's amendment necessitated the new ground(s) of rejection presented in this Office action. Accordingly, THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. See MPEP § 706.07(a). Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the date of this final action.
